

Status of TradingView "Share" Button and Embed Code (2025)

Current Situation

- The "Share" button and direct embed code for published ideas on TradingView appear to have been removed or are no longer available as of July 2025.
- Recent documentation and user reports indicate that the previous method—publishing an idea and then using the "Share" button below the chart to generate an embed code—is not present in the current TradingView interface.

What Is Still Possible

- You can still publish ideas on TradingView and share the URL of your idea or chart with others. This allows others to view your analysis in view-only mode, but it does not provide an embeddable widget for websites[1][2].
- The official TradingView widgets (such as the Advanced Chart Widget) are still available for embedding standard charts with built-in indicators, but these do not support embedding custom layouts, drawings, or Pine Script indicators from your personal chart[3].

Official Documentation and Alternatives

- TradingView's own FAQ and widget documentation confirm that embedding custom scripts or strategies in widgets is not possible. The documentation previously stated you could "publish an idea with your script and embed it," but the actual embed code option for ideas is no longer visible in the current UI[3].
- The only officially supported embedding method is through the widget constructor, which is limited to standard chart features and does not replicate a published idea's full setup.

Summary Table

Feature	Status (July 2025)
"Share" button for ideas	No longer available
Embed code for published ideas	No longer available
Share chart via URL	Available

Embed standard widgets	Available
Embed custom indicators/layouts	Not supported

What You Can Do

- To share your exact chart setup:
 - Enable sharing on your chart and provide the direct URL to others. They can view your chart in view-only mode on TradingView[1].
- To embed a chart on your website:
 - Use the official TradingView widget constructor for standard charts, but note the limitations regarding custom indicators and layouts[3].

In conclusion:

The previous workflow of embedding a published idea with all custom settings via an embed code is no longer supported on TradingView as of mid-2025. Only standard widgets and direct URL sharing remain available.
